Noise Monitoring Program

The PDK Noise Information Office operates a high-tech noise monitoring system to track noisy aircraft operations.

- The system allows airport staff to identify procedures and aircraft types that are most disturbing to the community.
- The system allows airport staff to provide information on the types of operations that occur over neighboring houses.
- The system allows for the implementation of a computer-generated “high noise event level threshold” that alerts airport staff to an extremely noisy operation at any time of the day or night. Letters are then sent to these operators notifying them of the existence of this system and asking that, without compromising safety, the aircraft review its operating practices and perhaps modify its procedures to keep this from happening again.
